

Abstract

Glutathione transferase (GST), preferably GST A3-3, is identified as target for treatment of cancer and other diseases responsive to inhibition of steroid hormone production. A method for screening of compounds or drug candidates that modulate, preferably inhibit, the activity of GST is described.